On August 10th, 1792, French Revolutionaries stormed the Tuileries Palace where King Louis XVI was living, killing hundreds of Swiss mercenaries in the process, and hunting down and arresting those that fled (the surviving Swiss mercs were later guillotined). They occupied the palace for a time, and King Louis was officially arrested a few days later, and the monarchy of France was officially abolished by the National Assembly.

Just saying, it's happened before. The idea that a national capital with a bunch of guards is somehow immune from the People just deciding to march in and take over is ridiculous. If there are millions of Patriots in DC on the 6th, there is actually no way anyone can stop them from simply going into Congress or the SC building and telling those "representatives" exactly what's what and what is going to happen next.

He's the commander in chief, President of the United States, that is good enough according to the oath I took.

"I, do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; and that I will obey the orders of the President of the United States and the orders of the officers appointed over me, according to regulations and the Uniform Code of Military Justice. So help me God."

Same, and we're still part of the Unorganized Militia and if the Commander in Chief activates and calls on the Militia, we are obligated to follow those orders.
